

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 02 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Dull and misty in east, sunshine developing south and west.

Today:

Many places will start dull and misty with some fog over hills and near North Sea coasts. Cloud lifting and breaking across southern and western parts, to allow sunny spells. Remaining cold under the cloud in north-east England.

Tonight:

Low cloud becoming more extensive again, with some areas of thick fog developing across eastern and central England. Clearer skies and frost in the north-west. Showers into south-western parts.

Wednesday:

Showers in south-west moving further north-east into Wales and central and south-east England, some heavy towards the west. Low cloud and fog slow to lift across central and eastern areas.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:

Cloudy with showery rain for southern areas Thursday morning, clearing south-eastwards. Elsewhere a band of light rain moves south bringing colder, clearer weather for all by Friday. Frosts becoming widespread.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.